The palace holds a long history. The Caracciolo’s family, after which the hotel is named, was an ancient Neapolitan family of byzantine origins, in the city since the IX century. The palace was built in the XIII century on the foundations of a pre-existing military fort.

The palace still has the typical, renaissance style, central cloister. In the XXI century the palace was carefully restored and renovated, the work was completed in 2009. The renovation enhanced the magnificence of the palace, while softening the style of the rooms with refined elegance.

Palazzo Caracciolo is located in one of the oldest and most central parts of Naples. It is very well connected to the main roads of the city and close to the Central Train Station. Palazzo Caracciolo holds 145 rooms, and every one of them is an encounter between history and modern hospitality needs.

The thick walls of the hotel make the rooms inherently noiseless and protected from the outside weather: cool in the summer and warm in the winter.

La Smorfia bed&breakfast is located on the third floor of an XVIIth century building in Via Santa Maria di Costantinopoli 30. The baroque palace, with its magnificent staircase and courtyard, inspired the name of the residence. In fact at the main entrance, where you can still see the original stables, the watering stand for horse carriages is still preserved, overlaid by the mocking face of a mask. From there comes the immediate connection with the Neapolitan “smorfia”, an ancient local method of choosing lottery numbers through the interpretation of dreams that gives specific numbers to events, people, animals and objects.
