The city of Pompeii is a partially buried Roman town-city near modern Naples. Along with Herculaneum, Pompeii was partially destroyed and buried under 4 to 6 m (13 to 20 ft) of ash and pumice in the eruption of Mount Vesuvius in AD 79. Pompeii was lost for nearly 1700 years before its rediscovery in 1748. Since then, its excavation has provided an extraordinarily detailed insight into the life of a city during the Pax Romana. Today, this UNESCO World Heritage Site is one of the most popular tourist attractions of Italy, with approximately 2,500,000 visitors every year.

The Phlegrean Fields are a nice archaeological area close to Naples. You will visit:

PISCINA MIRABILIS
Piscina Mirabilis is the largest and most monumental cistern of drinkable water ever built by the ancient Romans. The cistern, also known as "the Water Cathedral" for its largeness and majesty, is located in Bauli, the name that the ancient Romans gave to the current city of Bacoli.

SYBIL'S CAVE
The Antro della Sibilla is a long passage, about 131 m long and with a trapezoid shape. This passage was cut into the soft tufa by hand. It is lighted by multiple openings to the surface which gives the place a unique look on sunny days. When Vergil wrote his chronicles of the adventures of Trojan warrior Æneas in 19 BC, he described this place as the location of the oracle scene. Æneas landed in Cumae, visited the Sibilla oracle and descended into Hades at the nearby Lago d'Averno. Virgil described a cave with a hundred openings and this is a long trapezoid tunnel with many openings on one side. There are many legends about the Sybil, starting at least 600 BC.
